Google's G Suite Services

G-Suite is a kind of cloud computing, a suite of tools, programs and products produced by Google, first started on August 28, 2006, like Google Apps. The data and information are directly saved in the Google database center and then synchronized with the other data center for backup purposes. There are no ads in the G suite and the services are free to the consumer. In 2017, the number of subscribers exceeded 4 million and 70 million international companies within the G Suite database.
